A BRIEF HISTORY AND GENEALOGY
OF THE
JANNEY - GOODIN FAMILY

The Janney-Goodin Family traces its origin to both Thomas Warne and Thomas Janney who emigrated from England to America about the same time, 1683, but to different sections of the country. There is no account of Thomas Warne being persecuted in England because he was a Quaker, but persecution is the cause of Thomas Janney going to Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

Thomas Warne, the first Warne in America, of whom we have information, was one of the Twenty-four Proprietors who owned a part of East Jersey, now a part of New Jersey. It is reported in "Warne Genealogy" that Thomas Warne may have been a Quaker, but it is assumed he became an Episcopalian as he is buried in an Episcopal burying ground named Topanemus near Marlboro, Monmouth County, New Jersey.

Thomas Janney came to Bucks County, Pennsylvania, in the same year, 1683, with his family and two servants. He was a Quaker minister and traveled about England prior to his coming to America and also after arriving in Pennsylvania. The grandson of Thomas, Jacob Janney, moved to Loudoun County, Virginia, as did George Warne, son of Thomas Warne. George's daughter, Mary Warne, married Isaac Hughes, and their granddaughter, Sophia Holmes, married Lot Janney of Loudoun County, Virginia. No date is given. It is because of this marriage that the Janney-Goodin family traces its ancestry to Thomas Warne who is mentioned above.

WARNE FAMILY GENEALOGY

The Warne Family, as recorded in the Warne Genealogy by Labaw, is a very old one in England, how old or whence the name came, we do not know. The original family name of Warne in England was Waryn, then Warn, then Warne. Many old legal documents and records are signed Wayn or Wayne for Warn or Warne. The letter "y" was often used as a long "r". As in England, so in America, the name is and has been spelled both Warn and Warne. Even in some families the spelling Warner and Warren are used.

Ancient records in England quote a Warne as sheriff of Shropshire in 1066. The name is found among those of soldiers in the battles of Cressy 1346, a town in France, where the English under Edward III gained a great victory. The families of Warne for centuries have been very numerous in most counties of England. In the seventeenth century there were many branches of the Warne family in Cornwall and Devonshire, principally in the neighborhood of Plymouth whence Thomas Warne, one of the twenty-four Proprietors of East Jersey in colonial days, came. At the time of the Cromwellian insurrection, many of their number went abroad, some of them purchasing rebel lands in Ireland. In fact, quite a number of the original twenty-four Proprietors, besides Thomas Warne, merchant of Dublin, (and as the records show other Warnes) was among these people who earlier hailed from Devonshire, and hence were naturally in business ventures, more or less associated with each other. Also the families of Warne, especially near Plymouth, were much interested in shipping and colonial enterprises, such as agriculturists becoming merchants seeking a seaport, etc.

In Burke's Landed Gentry according to the "Genealogical Record of the Descendants of Thomas Carhart, of Cornwall, England," by Mary E. (Carhart) Dusenbury (A. S. Barnes & Co. 1880), the Warne family is recorded as seated in St. Colomb and Padstow, County Cornwall, England.

The Warne family has a coat of arms. The Warne Crest and Coat of Arms is pictured on Plate 17 opposite p. 32 in "A Genealogy of the Warne Family in America by Rev. George Warne Labaw, Frank Allaben Genealogical Co., 3 W. 42nd St., New York".

"The Warne Coat of Arms, as given by Mr. Stannard Warne of London, -- Sable, a cross or, in the first and fourth quarters a martlet of the second; in the second and third quarters a chaplet argent. The cross being gold shows that the arms are of English-men fighting in the Crusades. The martlet, without feet, is emblematical of foreign traveling, and is probably connected with the arms of the Arundel family. The chaplet is a garland or entwined wreath of leaves and flowers or of leaves alone."

Every Warne in America has a right to use the coat-of-arms altho in England only the head of the family can use the whole arms on his plate, paper, seal, etc; the other male members of the family may use the crest only.

Sir George Carteret was given a grant, East Jersey, by the Duke of York 1674; and West Jersey was given to Penn, Laury, and Lucas, no doubt Quakers. At the death of Sir George Carteret, Jan. 13, 1680, in his 80th year, left in his will that his land should be sold to pay his debts. Sale was made Feb. 1 and 2, 1682, to the famous Twelve Proprietors all said to be Quakers. William Penn's name appears as one of the twelve Proprietors. Others were, Robert West, Thomas Rudyard, Samuel Groome, Thomas Hart, Richard Mew, Thomas Wilcox, Ambrose Riggs, John Heywood, Hugh Hartshorne, Clement Plumstead, and Thomas Cooper. The purchase price was L3,400 or less than $17,000 and the purchasers became known as "The Twelve Proprietors of the Eastern Division of New Jersey". These twelve later on at different times, took a partner, ultimately the proprietors numbered twenty-four. The additional twelve being, Robert Barclay, Edward Billings, Robert Turner, James Brain, Arent Sonmans, William Gibson, Gawen Laurie, David Barclay, Thomas Barker, Thomas Warne, James Earl of Perth, Robert Gordon and John Drummond. All the twenty-four did not necessarily live in Jersey, most of them lived in England and Ireland. They not only had title to the property but powers of government also. At the time of the transfer of East Jersey to the twenty-four Proprietors, the principal towns were Bergen, Newark, Elizabethtown, Woodbridge, Piscataway, Middletown, and Shrewsbury. As to the boundaries of the Province of East Jersey there has always been uncertainty.

Thomas Warne, one of the twenty-four Proprietors of East Jersey, established the Warne family in America. His ancestry is uncertain. He was born in Plymouth, England, County Cornwall, and before coming to America in 1683, lived for some time in Ireland. The inscription on his tombstone, which was in good condition in 1911 at Topanemus, is the following: "Here lyes intered the body of Thomas Warne. He was born in Plymouth in Devenshire, in Great Britain, lived sometime in Ireland, and in the 31st year of his age came over a proprietor of East Jersey, who died with the dead paulsey May the 15 Anno 1722, aged seventy years." Copied from the slab itself by the author of Warne Family Genealogy, p. 64. Proprietor's grave is in Topanemus burying ground near Marlboro, Monmouth County, New Jersey. The exact spot is about one mile west of the village of Marlboro. Thomas Warne, possibly a Quaker, later converted to the Church of England, was buried in the Episcopal burying ground.

Thomas Warne died intestate at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, May 15, 1722, aged 70 years, making his date of birth 1652. His father's name was Stephen who may have come to America with his son. At one time they owned 375 acres of land and eleven servants. Unquestionably, Thomas Warne Gent., Thomas Warne carpenter, T. W. Proprietor, T. W. of Amboy Perth and T. W. of Middletown were the same person. "The names given by some to their plantations as "Warne's Neck" are significant. They reflect the brave ambitions of the early adventurers to found great estates in the New World, etc." Hence we can infer he was a man of wealth.

Thomas Warne did not marry until he was about 50 years of age; between 1698 and 1700. His wife was Mary, widow of Thomas Carhart, daughter of Robert Lord. Born July 13, 1668 at Cambridge, Massachusetts. They had six children, five sons and one daughter.

- I. Thomas Warne, b. 1652, m. Mary Lord Carhart, b. 1668.

Children of Thomas Warne and Mary Carhart are as follows:

- | | |
|------------|-----------|
| 1. Stephen | 4. Joshua |
| 2. Thomas | 5. George |
| 3. Samuel | 6. Sarah |

He also had three step-sons; John, Robert, and William Carhart whom he dearly loved and they shared his estate which was of considerable worth.

- II. George Warne, youngest son of Thomas Warne was born April 13, 1713, Perth Amboy, New Jersey, died Oct. 23, 1789. He married Abigail Warford, daughter of John and Elizabeth Warford of Monmouth, New Jersey, born April 19, 1718 and died November 16, 1794. He was buried in the old Mansfield graveyard near the village of Washington, New Jersey. Before the Revolutionary War, he moved with his family to the western part of the State along the Delaware River above Trenton near Frenchtown, to the top of the bluff called Warford's Rocks, and still so called (1904).

Three of George Warne's sons served in the Revolutionary War; Benjamin, Elijah, John and possibly Joseph. George, the father, assisted in getting boats for Washington's crossing the Delaware and according to one correspondent he ferried Washington in his own boat. John and Elijah were in the battles of Trenton, Princeton, and Monmouth. John was one of those who took the Hessian prisoners to Philadelphia after their capture at the battle of Trenton. George Warne may have been a Presbyterian since he was buried in the old Mansfield graveyard. His sons, George and Elijah, were trustees of the Presbyterian Church at Mansfield between the years of 1791 and 1800. From his will it is learned George Warne had considerable land and throughout the will the children's names are written Warn and not Warne.

Children of George and Abigal (Warford) Warne:

Both he and his wife are buried in the Presbyterian Church graveyard in Leesburg, Virginia. Isaac Hughes, a farmer has today a very large number of descendants. Isaac was a private in the American army of the Revolution. Proof of his honorable discharge by Lt.Col. John Alexander is as follows;

"May 8, 1781.

I do hereby certify that Isaac Hughes (Hues) has produced an able bodied man to serve his term of duty and is hereby discharged.

JANNEY - GOODIN FAMILY GENEALOGY

The Janney family descended from Randle Janney of Styall, Cheshire, England. He married Alice Wilkinson November 26, 1566, and died January 1595.

Thomas Janney was the first Janney to emigrate to America in 1683; at least he is the one of whom there is information in the History of Bucks County, Pennsylvania, 1887, pp. 440, 677, 955, 974, 1016, 1019, D.A.R. Library, Washington, D.C., and "Memoirs of Samuel Janney" now property of Helen Horn Steinmetz. Through the courtesy of Mrs. Leslie Bryant, 13 Second Ave., Auburn, New York, the following is the description of the Janney Coat of Arms.

"Shield ermine = white with black markings.
Diagonal band is a "bend" = Gules (Red).
Side stripes are cottiseds = or (Gold).
Crest on top is a hawk or falcon "close" meaning with wings down. Or (Gold).
"Belled of the last" = has a bell on one leg by which it could be followed.
Hawk is standing on a "glove fesse" (laid out straight sidewise) Argent or (Silver).
Crest is on wreath of twined silk using colors of the arms alternately - red and white.
Motto on ribbon is "Ducit Amor Patriae" black probably on red.
The Bend is Dexter, from upper left to lower right and uses 1/5 of the area of the shield.
It is said to represent the belt which designated Knighthood. Some think it represents the scaling ladder used in war. The cottiseds are 1/4 as wide as the Bend."

A sketch of the Janney Coat of Arms can be seen in Janney-Steinmetz History, Library of Congress, Genealogical Dept., Washington, D.C. As far as is known the Steinmetz- mentioned above is not the Ferdinand H. Steinmetz family, husband of Helen Horn Steinmetz. See Genealogy and Family History of Johann Herman Steinmetz. Johns Hopkins, born May 19, 1795, died December 24, 1873, whose mother was Hannah Janney, was the founder of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Among the names of the trustees appointed by Johns Hopkins of Johns Hopkins Hospital, we find the name of Arthur M. Janney, a relative.

Thomas Janney, the one who emigrated to America, was born about December 1633, baptized at Styall, England, January 11, 1634. He joined the Society of Friends 1654 and became a minister in 1655. He suffered loss of goods and was imprisoned for religious testimony. He married Marjorium (Margery) Heath, November 24, 1660. He sailed on the ship, the Endeavor, arriving July 29, 1683, settled in Lower Makefield, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, with his wife Marjorium, sons Jacob, Thomas, Abel, and Joseph, and two servants, John Meld and Sam Falkner. He was a farmer. He served as a member of Governor's Council and is mentioned in letters of William Penn in terms of regard. Before he emigrated to America he traveled extensively as a minister of the Gospel, visited Ireland and many parts of England, afterwards churches in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New England, Long Island, and Maryland.

He returned to England to visit his family and friends and died December 1696 in Cheshire, England, aged 63 years. He had been in the ministry for a period of 42 years. Before he left for England he gave ground, June 4, 1690, to the Falls, Pennsylvania Quaker Monthly Meeting, to be used as a burying ground.

Much of the following data is taken from the Janney Family Tree, a copy owned by Helen Horn Steinmetz, Union Springs, New York. Other data gathered by Helen Steinmetz from various sources, one being "Warne Genealogy" by Labaw. The Janney Family Tree was compiled by Samuel M. Janney 1868. It represents nine generations and contains 2,300 names. Janney's History of The Friends, Vol. II, p. 392, Vol. III, pp. 53, 248, and 249 used as source material.

"By the registry of arrivals it appears that Thomas Janney and his wife with their four sons and two servants arrived in the Delaware river the 29th of 7th mo. 1683 in the ship Endeavor of London. He was in the 50th year of his age and had been a minister in the society of Friends 28 yrs." This notation taken as written on the Janney Tree.

There are eight known copies of the Janney Tree in existence in the United States. Library of Congress, Library of D.A.R., one owned by Henrietta Horn, Santa Ana, California, and another by Helen Horn Steinmetz. Henrietta Horn is a distant cousin, being descended from Bleakstone Janney. She is also a second cousin on the Horn line. See Henry Horn and Descendants p. T-58. Another copy of the Janney Tree was sent to Helen Horn Steinmetz, June 12, 1963, by W. R. Janney of 25 Monroe Rd., Princeton, New Jersey. He knows of two and maybe three Janney Trees. Probably quite a number were made and maybe scattered thru out the United States.

Samuel M. Janney, who compiled the Janney Family Tree was the eldest son of Abigah Janney and Jane McPherson, daughter of John and Hannah McPherson, who were of Scottish descent. He married Elizabeth Janney, daughter of John and Elizabeth Janney, their grand-fathers being first cousins. He was in business, living near Alexandria, Virginia, but also an Elder and Minister of Quaker faith. Altho a Virginian he supported the Union cause and during the Civil War he held a passport so that he could go through the Union lines. He saw President Lincoln on several occasions. During his later life he was Superintendent of Indian Affairs, and lived in Omaha, Nebraska. He was an historian, wrote poetry, and an author of many treatises on the Quaker faith. He kept a journal which later became "Memoirs of Samuel M. Janney. He died April 30, 1880, aged 79 years.

His wife continued living on the farm until about 1900 when with her daughter, Mary, or Mollie, as she was affectionately known, moved to Bellefontaine. The Goodin homestead was a very desirable spot; a brick house of four rooms with other rooms attached. There were large pine trees planted in two rows from the front door.
